DEATH OF DOCTOR GAYLORD P. CLARK

Dean of College of Medicine for Several Years

Dean of the College of Medicine at Syracuse University died on September 16 at his home, No. 619 East Genesee streets, at 0:15 A.M. The cause of death was pneumonia.

Dean of the College of Medicine at Syracuse University died on September 16 at his home, No. 619 East Genesee streets, at 0:15 A.M. The cause of death was pneumonia.

FOOTBALL SQUAD AT CAZENOVIA

Early Practice Proves Beneficial—Stimson May Play

The football team returns tomorrow afternoon from Cazenovia after some hard work in the preliminary practice. The men are all in fine condition and ready for scrimmage work in their first practices on the campus tomorrow afternoon.

The training has consisted of a full day’s work. The men take a long tram before breakfast, practice at 9:30, and three and a half hours in the evening. A set of signals has been well worked up and a number of plays has been arranged.

DEAN GAYLORD P. CLARK

Doctor Gaylord Parsons Clark, who was born in Syracuse, November 15, 1859, received his medical degree from the College of Medicine at Syracuse, from which he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1884. He was the author of several works relating to his profession.

Doctor Clark was known to be an able man in his line, and could have made a successful profession if he had desired to devote his talents to such a calling. In the past few years Syracuse has been thrown into the death of his wife’s death, those of John R. Proctor of the Library, Lewis M. Ewing and Marion McKechnie of the Rochester, and those of his wife, Mrs. Gaylord P. Clark, of the College of Medicine.

BOOKS MOVED TO NEW LIBRARY

The past three weeks have been spent in moving the office of the University. The volumes are being placed in the new building, which is now nearing completion.